Chicago Notes & Bibliography: Citation Examples + Rules

Chicago Notes & Bibliography (18th ed.): Citation Examples & Essential Rules

For NPS theses, papers, and publications: to cite properly, follow the citation examples and apply the essential rules.

The Chicago Manual of Style leaves a great deal unspecified and up to interpretation. The NPS Citation Guide streamlines and simplifies Chicago's guidance; your professors, GWC instructors, and thesis processors may interpret or explain Chicago's guidelines slightly differently. Ultimately, the responsibility for clear attribution of source material lies with you, the author.

Citation Examples

Artificial Intelligence (GenAI)

- While generative AI can help you develop initial understanding of a topic, it should not be cited in your work as a source of reliable information; see Guidance for Gen AI Use in Academic Work and DKL's GenAI research guide.

Blog

- Citations of blog entries are generally relegated to the notes; a frequently cited blog, however, may be included in the bibliography.
- Blogs that are part of a larger publication such as a newspaper or website, give the name of the publication after the title of the blog and format appropriately (italicize newspaper titles; keep website names in non-italic type).
- If it is not clear from the titles, the word blog may be added in parentheses after the title of the blog.
- Do not use "Staff Writer" or "Editors" as the author; if no author name is listed, use the blog name.

Book

- Follow guidance in the Essential Rules for including page numbers.
- If the city of publication is not a major city or may be confused with another city of the same name, the abbreviation of the state, province, or (sometimes) country is usually added. Washington is traditionally followed by DC, but other major cities, such as Los Angeles and Baltimore, need no state abbreviation.
- For works with a translator, follow the guidance for edited books but substitute "trans." for "ed." in the notes and "translated" for "edited" in the references.

Class Notes, Lecture, Presentation, Workshop

- Class notes include lecture notes, slides/PowerPoints, and any other course-related material published by an instructor.
- If class notes are not available to your readers, format as a personal communication using professor's/lecturer's name and "class notes."
- Class notes and lectures published to your online course site are considered unpublished.
- Follow guidance in the Essential Rules for including page numbers.

Data Set / Database

- For information retrieved from a database, provide enough information for your readers to replicate the search. In your text, include the name of the database or the source of the data, along with other descriptive information (such as the unit of observation, the years selected, the sample size, and/or other selection criteria).
- Include the date in a short citation of unpublished data only if multiple data sets have been received from the same source.
- Since an unpublished data set is irretrievable, it is treated as a personal communication and therefore not cited in references.

Newspaper Article

- Do not use the leading word “the” when referencing newspaper names (New York Times, not The New York Times).
- Follow guidance in the Essential Rules for including page numbers.
- For online newspaper references, use a DOI. If no DOI is present, use a URL or name of database.
- Do not use "Staff Writer" or "Editors" as the author; if no author name is listed, use the newspaper name.

Personal Communication

- Personal communication is material obtained from a person, organization, or other source that your typical readers will be unable to access.
- A source should be cited as a personal communication when there is no direct, reliable path for your readers to retrieve the information. Examples include phone calls, conversations, letters, emails, files attached to an email, internal documents, documents posted to a listserv or internal server, or any unpublished source to which your readers have no access.
- Personal communications, interviews, and emails may be described in your text (see "Interview," for example) or cited in notes (see "Personal Communication" or "Email"). Either format is acceptable; please be consistent within your text.
- If a personal name is not given, include an occupation or position instead. Example: N: Lieutenant commander, USN, personal communication, April 11, 2022.

Unpublished / Informally Published Work

- For works accepted for publication, follow the appropriate style for the source type, using “forthcoming” in place of the date. The example given is for a journal article.
- For unpublished works that are not available to readers, do not include an entry in the list of references.
- Follow guidance in the Essential Rules for including page numbers.

Website / Webpage

- The title of a website rarely includes ".com"—for example, BBC online is "BBC," not "BBC.com."
- Italicize newspaper names but not names of news organizations—for example, New York Times, not Reuters, Bloomberg, CNN, etc. These news organizations only have an online presence, whereas the New York Times has both an online and print counterpart.
- Do not use "Staff Writer" or "Editors" as the author; if no author name is listed, use the organization name.

Essential Rules

Accessed Dates

Only include date accessed if the source material has no date.

Author Names: Honorifics

Do not include honorifics (Dr., Col., Professor, etc.) when citing author names. Including these titles in the body of your document is acceptable.

Identifying Authors of Official Documents

For the National Security Strategy, cite the president as the author.

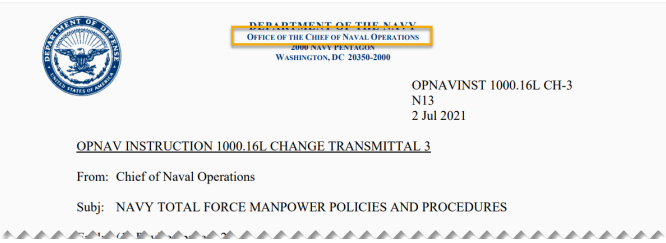
For other official documents, the author is the organization immediately responsible for creating the document. In the example below, the author is the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and the publisher is the Department of the Navy.



DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS
2000 NAVY PENTAGON
WASHINGTON, DC 20350-2000

OPNAVINST 1000.16L CH-3
N13
2 Jul 2021

OPNAV INSTRUCTION 1000.16L CHANGE TRANSMITTAL 3

From: Chief of Naval Operations

Subj: NAVY TOTAL FORCE MANPOWER POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

In the example above, the author is NOT an umbrella organization, signatory, or any of the following:

- Chief of Naval Operations
- Deputy Chief of Naval Operations
- W. F. Moran
- Department of Defense
- Navy Pentagon
- R. P. Burke
- United States of America

Do not include acronyms for organizations listed as authors in the List of References or footnotes:

- YES: Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.
- NO: Office of the Chief of Naval Operations (CNO or OCNO).
- NO: CNO or OCNO.

Bibliography vs. List of References

What is the difference between them?

- A List of References includes all works cited in a text
- A Bibliography lists all works cited and consulted

The NPS Thesis Processing Office prefers a List of References for the following:

- Thesis
- Capstone project report
- MBA report
- Dissertation

For papers, check with your professors for their preference.

Capitalization: Title Case vs. Sentence case

Title Case	Sentence case
Love among the Ruins: A Memoir of Life and Love in Hamburg, 1945	Love among the ruins: A memoir of life and love in Hamburg, 1945
Capitalize everything except: • conjunctions (and, but, or, etc.) • prepositions (to, of, on, among, between, etc.) • articles (a, an, the)	Capitalize only: • the first words in titles and subtitles • proper nouns

Note: Always format the information in your citations (titles, author names, etc.) according to the requirements of the citation style you are using, regardless of how it appears in the original source.

Country Names with Government Organizations

When naming government organizations, be consistent: for example, either Department of Defense or U.S. Department of Defense. If citing organizations from multiple countries, ensure that it is clear which organization is associated with which country—for example, Australian Department of Defence, South African Department of Defence, Sri Lanka Ministry of Defence, Singapore Ministry of Defence.

Figures / Images / Graphs

A citation is required if you did not wholly create the figure—i.e., if you used someone else's image or data. A citation is not needed when all elements of the figure are your own creation.

- If you use the figure exactly as it appears in the source, use "Source: ___."
- If you alter the original figure or use someone else's image or data to create the figure, use "Adapted from ___."

Footnote Placement & Signal Phrases

Where in the sentence does my footnote go?

- Single footnotes go at the end of a sentence, after the punctuation, like this.[1]
- "If the sentence ends with a quotation, the quotation marks go outside the punctuation, then the footnote is placed after the quotation marks, like this."[2]
- Do not insert any spaces before a footnote; do put a space between a footnote and the beginning of the next sentence.

Multiple Citations in a Single Sentence

When citing more than one source in a single sentence, there are two options:

- Place a single footnote at the end of the sentence, outside the punctuation, and include all citations in this one footnote, separated by semicolons. CMOS 13.61
- Place each footnote at the end of the sentence or clause containing the information it cites. CMOS 13.29

⚠ Never place more than one footnote at the end of a sentence. CMOS 13.31

In the paragraph below, the reference numbers are highlighted in yellow and the signal phrases are highlighted in blue. Note that the second sentence is common knowledge, whereas the final sentence does not need a citation because it is the opinion of the author. (See "How Often to Cite?")

In a Journal of Restaurant Marketing article, restaurateur Shawna Jackson contends that a restaurant's color scheme influences how hungry its patrons are.[1] Consider popular fast-food restaurants, which often use red and yellow in their advertising and décor. According to a study by Roberta Chen and David Lopez, restaurant customers feel energized in red and yellow environments, which encourages them to order more food.[2] The same study indicates that patrons felt relaxed in blue and purple environments, which causes them to "spend more time considering the menu options and eat at a slower pace."[3] Although blue décor can give a restaurant a casual, laid-back feel, industry experts believe this color can negatively affect profit.[4] Accordingly, it is difficult to identify a popular restaurant chain that decorates with calmer hues.

* Note: no page number is necessary in footnote 1 because the sentence describes the source's general argument rather than data or analysis from a specific location in the source.

- Using Signal Phrases Effectively

How Often to Cite?

The Chicago Manual of Style advises that "footnotes should be placed where you need them. . . . Whenever you can imagine the reader asking 'Says who' you should add a note." Clarity is your goal as a writer, and what constitutes clear attribution in any given context will depend to some extent on the particulars of your text. Nevertheless, the following are some reliable rules of thumb:

- Use a footnote (even if you also use a signal phrase) the first time you quote, paraphrase, or otherwise use material from a source in your paragraph.
- Remember: One footnote at the end of a string of sentences or a paragraph cannot "cover" the entire section.
- Always use footnotes for direct quotes.
- Use footnotes, signal phrases, or sentence flow to indicate ongoing use of this same material.
- Be sure to use a footnote again when drawing upon information from a different location in the source (see rules for including page numbers).

Ibid. and Shortened Citations

There are three forms of notes:

- Full citation for first appearance: Use only when citing a source the first time.
- Shortened citations for subsequent appearances: Author or Organization name, Shortened Title, page number. Use when citing a source again (after the first time).
  - When citing multiple sources with the same author and same title, include the date in the shortened citation to differentiate them.
- Ibid. (not preferred): Points to the source cited in the previous note.

⚠ Chicago prefers shortened citations for follow-on citing, but ibid. is still allowed when the source being cited is the same as in the immediately preceding footnote. See CMOS 13.37. Be consistent. Use either ibid. or shortened citations for follow-on citing.

Example Footnotes List:

Note	Explanation
[12] Toni Morrison, Beloved (Vintage, 2004), 3.	full citation on first appearance
[13] Morrison, *Beloved,*18.	shortened citation indicating continued use of Beloved
[14] Toni Morrison, Song of Solomon (Vintage, 2004), 45.	full citation on first appearance
[16] Morrison, Beloved, 52.	shortened citation reintroducing Beloved, a source already cited in full
[18] Morrison, Song of Solomon, 240; Morrison, Beloved, 32.	shortened citation indicating that the information comes from two sources already cited in full
[19] Morrison, Beloved, 33.	shortened citation indicating which of the two Morrison sources the information is from

Missing Info

If any information is missing from a source (a journal with no volume number, for example), simply omit that information. For sources consulted in hardcopy, omit the URL and any additional verbiage that introduces it. Anything retrieved online, however, MUST have a link. The only exception is journals retrieved from a subscription database such as ProQuest.

Multiple Authors, et al.

Footnotes

- Up to two authors: include all of them
- More than two authors: include only the first author, followed by et al.

Bibliography / List of References

- Up to six authors: include all of them
- More than six authors: include only the first three, followed by et al.

Online Sources: Links

When citing an online document (for example, a thesis, report, or journal article) in a full note or listing it in the references, if possible, provide a DOI. If the source does not have a DOI, link to the document itself (PDF, etc.) or to the landing page that directs the reader to the full text.

Do not insert a hard or soft return within the URL string; doing so breaks the link.

Page Numbers & Other Locators

In footnotes, the page number(s) is needed when

- Quoting – Always include
- Paraphrasing – Always include
- Summarizing – Include if summarizing a single continuous passage in a work

Example

> N: Michael Pollan and Daisy Potatohead, The Omnivore's Dilemma: A Natural History of Four Meals (Penguin, 2006), 99–100.
> S: Pollan and Potatohead, The Omnivore's Dilemma, 100.

- No page number is needed in a footnote when you are referring to the source as a whole. For example: "George W. Bush's Decision Points recounts pivotal moments during his time in office."
- If unsure, default to including the page number(s).

If the source does not contain page numbers, often with electronic formats, include as much information as needed for the reader to locate the material. In citations especially of shorter electronic works presented as a single, searchable document, such locators may be unnecessary.

Locator Options	Examples
chapter number	chap. 2
paragraph number	para. 3
section heading	sec. 24
descriptive phrase	under "The Battleground"
location numbers	loc. 444 of 3023, Kindle
page numbers	check against—and cite to—the printed version if possible
table, figure, or slide number	table 1.4 fig. 3 slide 5

See CMOS 13.20: Page numbers and other locators and 14.59: Page numbers in ebooks.

In the list of references/bibliography

For journal articles, include the page range.

Example

> B: Newmann, William W. "Reorganizing for National Security and Homeland Security." Public Administration Review 62, no. 1 (2002): 126–37. ProQuest.

Print vs. Online Sources

When citing a source retrieved online, use the "online" format even when you or someone else printed out the material. For example, if you print out a thesis or your advisor provides you with a printed thesis, it is still categorized as an online document.

Only cite as a print source when the material has been produced by a publisher in hard copy. For example, if you obtain a print journal or book from the library stacks, it is categorized as a printed source.

Secondary / Indirect Sources

An indirect source is a source that cites some other work that you discuss in your text.

Whenever possible, consult primary sources and your sources' sources yourself. Upon investigation of the primary source, you may find you disagree with the indirect source author's analysis or methods.

How to Incorporate Indirect Sources

The following passage incorporates a properly credited indirect source. The indirect source information is highlighted in yellow; the primary source information is highlighted in blue.

> Walker describes Miguel Roig's 1999 experiment, which correlates inadequate paraphrasing in student writing with poor reading comprehension.[1] Citing Roig's data, Walker explains that "students do in fact possess skills necessary for paraphrasing but … may be impeded from applying those skills when dealing with rigorous text."[2]

Note: Footnotes for indirect sources must cite both the primary and the indirect source; in the references list, include only the indirect source (the source you consulted—see example).

For more information

See the TPO's "Citing Your Sources' Sources" handout.

Tables

A citation is required if you did not wholly create the table—i.e., if you used someone else's data. A citation is not needed when all elements of the table are your own creation.

- If you use the table exactly as it appears in the source, use "Source: ___."
- If you alter the original table or if you use someone else's data to create the table, use "Adapted from ___."

Translations and Works Not in English

For works with a translator, follow the format for edited books but substitute "trans." for "ed." in the notes and "translated" for "edited" in the references:

N: Maxence Manqué, Old and Rejected Poems, trans. Pemily Hickinson (Narrow Fellow Press, 1989), 472.

S: Manqué, Old and Rejected Poems, 889.

B: Manqué, Maxence. Old and Rejected Poems. Translated by Pemily Hickinson. Narrow Fellow Press, 1989.

If you provide the translation to a non-English work, format the original title in sentence case, then give your translated title, also in sentence case, in square brackets immediately following. Note that the other formatting rules for titles—italics and quotation marks—remain the same:

N: Maxence Manqué, "L'esthétique de l'échec" [The aesthetics of failure], in Éviter les clichés et des autres clichés [Avoiding clichés and other clichés], ed. Hamish Sweeney (Stew & Offspring, 1992), 5.

S: Manqué, "L'esthétique de l'échec," 11.

B: Manqué, Maxence. "L'esthétique de l'échec" [The aesthetics of failure]. In Éviter les clichés et des autres clichés [Avoiding clichés and other clichés], edited by Hamish Sweeney. Stew & Offspring, 1992.
