IEEE: Citation Examples + Rules

IEEE (2023 ver.): Citation Examples & Essential Rules

For NPS theses, papers, and publications: to cite properly, follow the citation examples and apply the essential rules.

The official IEEE style guide contains some inconsistencies and discrepancies. The Thesis Processing Office will continue to accept the BibTeX IEEE format embedded in the NPS LaTeX thesis template.

Personal Communication

- Personal communication is material obtained directly from a person, organization, or other source that your typical readers will be unable to access.
- A source should be cited as a personal communication when there is no direct, reliable path for your readers to retrieve the information. Examples include phone calls, conversations, letters, emails, files attached to an email Including attachments, internal documents, documents posted to a listserv or internal server, or any unpublished source to which your readers have no access.
- If a personal name is not given, include an occupation or position instead. Example: [3] Lieutenant commander, USN, personal communication, Apr. 11, 2022.

Website / Webpage

- The title of a website rarely includes ".com"—for example, BBC online is "BBC," not "BBC.com."
- Italicize newspaper names, not names of news organizations—for example, New York Times, not Reuters, Bloomberg, CNN, etc. These news organizations only have an online presence, whereas The New York Times has both an online and print counterpart.
- Do not use "Staff Writer" or "Editors" as the author; if no author name is listed, use the organization name.

Essential Rules

Abbreviations

- IEEE List of Acronyms and Abbreviations from the IEEE Editorial Style Manual, 2023

Accessed Dates

Only include date accessed if the source material has no date.

Author Names: Honorifics

Do not include honorifics (Dr., Col., Professor, etc.) when citing author names. Including these titles in the body of your document is acceptable.

Identifying Authors of Official Documents

For the National Security Strategy, cite the president as the author.

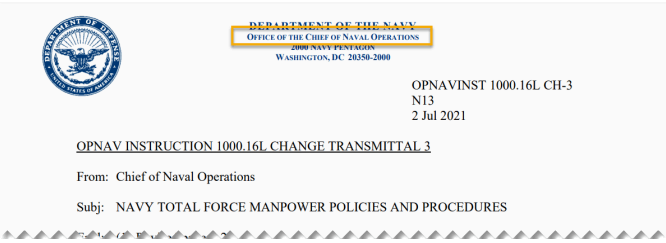
For other official documents, the author is the organization immediately responsible for creating the document. In the example below, the author is the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and the publisher is the Department of the Navy.



DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS
2000 NAVY PENTAGON
WASHINGTON, DC 20350-2000

OPNAVINST 1000.16L CH-3
N13
2 Jul 2021

OPNAV INSTRUCTION 1000.16L CHANGE TRANSMITTAL 3

From: Chief of Naval Operations

Subj: NAVY TOTAL FORCE MANPOWER POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

In the example above, the author is NOT an umbrella organization, signatory, or any of the following:

- Chief of Naval Operations
- Deputy Chief of Naval Operations
- W. F. Moran
- Department of Defense
- Navy Pentagon
- R. P. Burke
- United States of America

Do not include acronyms for organizations listed as authors in the List of References or footnotes:

- YES: Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.
- NO: Office of the Chief of Naval Operations (CNO or OCNO).
- NO: CNO or OCNO.

Bibliography vs. List of References

What is the difference between them?

- A List of References includes all works cited in a text
- A Bibliography lists all works cited and consulted

The NPS Thesis Processing Office prefers a List of References for the following:

- Thesis
- Capstone project report
- MBA report
- Dissertation

For papers, check with your professors for their preference.

Capitalization: Title Case vs. Sentence case

Title Case	Sentence case
Love among the Ruins: A Memoir of Life and Love in Hamburg, 1945	Love among the ruins: A memoir of life and love in Hamburg, 1945
Capitalize everything except: • conjunctions (and, but, or, etc.) • prepositions (to, of, on, among, between, etc.) • articles (a, an, the)	Capitalize only: • the first words in titles and subtitles • proper nouns

Note: Always format the information in your citations (titles, author names, etc.) according to the requirements of the citation style you are using, regardless of how it appears in the original source.

Country Names with Government Organizations

When naming government organizations, be consistent: for example, either Department of Defense or U.S. Department of Defense. If citing organizations from multiple countries, ensure that it is clear which organization is associated with which country—for example, Australian Department of Defence, South African Department of Defence, Sri Lanka Ministry of Defence, Singapore Ministry of Defence.

Equations

Every equation that is not field-specific common knowledge needs to be cited. You may weave the source into the narrative:

- The author applied the X method [4] to describe ...
- The derivation that follows is summarized from [4].

Here is an example of citing properly before the equation. Note the period after the equation; the equation must function grammatically as part of the text:

The DQL algorithm calculates the target Q-value to use when training the DQN [12], and can be expressed as

$$Q_{target}(s,a) = r + \gamma \cdot \max_{a'} Q_\theta(s',a'). \tag{2.2}$$

Source: M. D. Akers, "Forming adversarial example attacks against deep neural networks with reinforcement learning," M.S. thesis, Dept. Comp. Sci., Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, CA, USA 2023.

And here is an example of how to cite an equation after it is presented:

The on-resistance of a semiconductor is a function of the ideal drift region and is given by the equation where W_D is the width of the ideal drift region shown in Figure 2.1, q is the charge of an electron, and N_D is the doping concentration of the drift region [1].

$$R_{on} = \frac{W_D}{q\mu_n N_D}, \tag{2.1}$$

- Citing Equations in IEEE
  Look under the "Citing Responsibly" heading

Figures / Images / Graphs

A citation is required if you did not wholly create the figure—i.e., if you used someone else's image or data. A citation is not needed when all elements of the figure are your own creation.

See Figure 1 for placement of the title and the bracketed citation.

- Put a period and a space after the title.
- If you use the figure exactly as it appears in the source, use "Source: ___."
- If you alter the original figure or use someone else's image or data to create the figure, use "Adapted from ___."

- Thesis Template

How Often to Cite?

- Remember: one citation at the end of a string of sentences or a paragraph cannot "cover" the entire section.
- Cite a source the first time it is used in each paragraph.
- Every sentence thereafter in the paragraph that uses information from this same source must contain either a signal phrase or a citation clearly indicating where the information came from.
    - Note: always use a citation (even if you also use a signal phrase) every time you quote material.

In-text Citation Placement & Signal Phrases

Citation Order

- IEEE strongly prefers that bracketed in-text citations appear sequentially, beginning with [1], within the body of the text; it does not matter in what order they appear in the List of Tables and the List of Figures.

Where in the sentence does my bracketed citation go?

- If you name your source(s) in a given sentence, a bracketed citation follows immediately after mentioning the source. Example: Rejecting Abbott and Costello's method [1], Laurel and Hardy [2] propose an altogether different model for optimizing hat density.
- Bracketed citations can also be treated as source names themselves. Example: In contrast to [1], [2] proposes an altogether different model.
  - Note: Do not, however, begin a sentence with a bracketed citation.
- Otherwise, bracketed citations are placed at the end of the phrase [3] or sentence they cover [4], inside the punctuation, like this [5].
  - If the sentence ends with a quotation, "close the quote, then place the citation between the quotation marks and the punctuation, like this" [6].
- Do not insert spaces between a bracketed citation and the punctuation that follows it.

In the paragraph below, citations are highlighted in yellow and signal phrases are in blue. Note that the second sentence is common knowledge, whereas the final sentence is clearly the opinion of the author.

> Smith's study [1] indicates that red and yellow are the best colors with which to decorate your restaurant because they induce feelings of hunger. Consider popular fast-food chains, which often use red and yellow in their advertising and décor. According to Smith's study, restaurant customers felt more energized in red and yellow environments, which encouraged them to order more food. The same study explained that patrons felt relaxed in blue and purple environments, which encouraged them to "spend more time considering the menu options and eat at a slower pace." Although other hospitality research suggests blue décor can give your restaurant a casual, laid-back atmosphere [2], Smith believes it encourages patrons to linger at their tables without ordering additional food or beverages. Accordingly, it is difficult to identify a popular chain restaurant that decorates with calmer hues.

- Using Signal Phrases Effectively

Missing Info

If any information is missing from a source (a journal with no volume number, for example), simply omit that information. For sources consulted in hardcopy, omit the URL and any additional verbiage that introduces it. Anything retrieved online, however, MUST have a link. The only exception is journals retrieved from a subscription database such as ProQuest.

Multiple Authors, et al.

- In the List of References, if a source has more than six authors, include the first author's name followed by et al. (in italics)
- In the body of the text, if a source has three or more authors, include the first author's name followed by et al.
  Example: Ma et al. [19] extended the work …

Rules for the MAE Department:

- In the List of References, list all the authors.
- In the body of the text, use et al. when three or more names are given.
  Example: Ma et al. [19] extended the work …

Multiple Sources Bracketing Format

Correct format: [23], [28]–[35], [77]

or [23], [28], [29], [30], [31], [32], [33], [34], [35], [77]

Incorrect format: [23, 34, 77]

Online Sources: Links

When listing an online document (for example, a thesis, report, or journal article) in the references, if possible, provide a DOI. If the source does not have a DOI, link to the document itself (PDF, etc.) or to the landing page that directs the reader to the full text.

- Do not insert a hard or soft return within the URL string: doing so breaks the link.
- A DOI or URL does not belong in an in-text citation. Ever.

Page Numbers

It is not necessary to include page numbers in bracketed citations.

For a portion in a book, journal, or other volume, include page-number range in List of References/Bibliography.

Example: [7] P. Haynes, “Al-Qaeda, oil dependence, and U.S. foreign policy,” in Energy Security and Global Politics: The Militarization of Resource Management, D. Moran and J. A. Russell, Eds. New York, NY, USA: Routledge, 2009, pp. 62–74.

Print vs. Online Sources

When citing a source retrieved online, use the "online" format even when you or someone else printed out the material. For example, if you print out a thesis or your advisor provides you with a printed thesis, it is still categorized as an online document.

Only cite as a print source when the material has been produced by a publisher in hard copy. For example, if you obtain a print journal or book from the library stacks, it is categorized as a printed source.

Secondary / Indirect Sources

An indirect source is a source that cites some other work that you discuss in your text.

Whenever possible, consult primary sources and your sources' sources yourself. Upon investigating the primary source, you may find you disagree with the indirect source author's analysis or methods.

How to Incorporate Indirect Sources

The following passage incorporates a properly credited indirect source. The indirect source information is highlighted in yellow; the primary source information is highlighted in blue.

> Walker describes Miguel Roig's 1999 experiment, which correlates inadequate paraphrasing in student writing with poor reading comprehension. Citing Roig's data, Walker explains that "students do in fact possess skills necessary for paraphrasing but … may be impeded from applying those skills when dealing with rigorous text" [1].

Note: Include only the indirect source (the source you consulted) in your reference list.

For more information

See the TPO's "Citing Your Sources' Sources" handout.

Tables

A citation is required if you did not wholly create the table—i.e., if you used someone else's data. A citation is not needed when all elements of the table are your own creation.

See Table 1 for placement of the title and the bracketed citation.

- Put a period and a space after the title.
- If you use the table exactly as it appears in the source, use "Source: ___."
- If you alter the original table or if you use someone else's data to create the table, use "Adapted from ___."
